Flavortext:

One of the Designer's hobbies was dice games. Strangely, it's said that they would spend hours simply rolling a die across a grid, muttering "all that matters is the pips I can see". We believe that one of their passwords is named after a city location where the Designer would play such dice games.

In the illustration below, the upper die may be obtained by rolling the lower die one space up the grid, then one space right. Or it could be obtained by moving left, down, right, up, up, up, right, down, left, up, right, and down.

Many things are possible in The Array, but maybe not every dice roll is...